Slogan and Themes

Nature+

The Congress theme is Nature+, a simple and memorable slogan that captures the fundamental importance of nature and its inherent link to every aspect of our lives. Nature+ is like the beginning of a mathematical equation. But it is an unfinished one; something must come after to make it complete.

Nature is the vital component of every aspect of our lives, from the economies we have developed to the food we put in our children's mouths. Everything we do, everything we try to achieve is intrinsically attached to Nature.

This is a bond we cannot break.

Nature is naturally strong. Even the most delicate looking plant, animal or ecosystem is relatively tough, their survival instincts honed over generations of evolution. But many years of human civilization have undermined our environment and the fundamental natural infrastructure that supports our lives, communities and economies.

Nature+ is about boosting the resilience of nature – improving how quickly nature and people adapt to change. Better use of the inherent robustness of nature leads to healthier natural systems, better results from ecosystem and biodiversity restoration, and healthier people, communities and economies.

The Congress will explore many of our most pressing environmental and development challenges from this perspective and how strong and resilient nature is intricately linked to solving these issues.

Each day of the Forum is dedicated to a particular theme. For logistical efficiency, some themes are also addressed on other days. Throughout the programme, the following icons will help you recognize which themes are addressed by the various Congress sessions.

About the World Conservation Congress

As the world's largest and most important conservation event, the IUCN World Conservation Congress is a unique event with a unique audience. It is the only global summit that represents every aspect of conservation, bringing together leaders of all levels – from governments and international NGOs to academia and local associations.

Held every four years, the IUCN Congress aims to improve how we manage our natural environment for human, social and economic development. Leaders from government, the public sector, non-governmental organizations, business, UN agencies and social organizations discuss, debate and decide solutions for the world's most pressing environment and development issues.

Effective conservation action cannot be achieved by conservationists alone. The 2012 IUCN World Conservation Congress is the place to put aside differences and work together to provide the means and mechanisms for good environmental governance, engaging all parts of society to share both responsibilities and the benefits of conservation.

The Congress has Two Main Parts:

- The Forum is a hub of public debates bringing together people from all walks of life to discuss the world's most pressing conservation issues. There are many different types of events you can get involved in to explore the depths of conservation and innovation.
- The Members' Assembly is IUCN's highest decision-making body. A unique global environmental parliament, it involves governments and NGOs – large and small, national and international – making joint decisions.

For 2012, the IUCN World Conservation Congress has adopted a new format, aiming for greater coherence and cross-fertilization between the two parts. Main messages of each day of the Forum are presented to the Assembly the following morning. Forum sessions related to motions presented at the Assembly are also identified.

About IUCN

IUCN, International Union for Conservation of Nature, helps the world find pragmatic solutions to our most pressing environment and development challenges.

IUCN works on biodiversity, climate change, energy, human livelihoods and greening the world economy by supporting scientific research, managing field projects all over the world, and bringing governments, NGOs, the UN and companies together to develop policy, laws and best practice.

IUCN is the world's oldest and largest global environmental organization, with more than 1,200 government and NGO members and almost 11,000 volunteer experts in some 160 countries. IUCN's work is supported by over 1,000 staff in 60 offices and hundreds of partners in public, NGO and private sectors around the world.

What Does IUCN ?

Conserving biodiversity is central to the mission of IUCN. We demonstrate how biodiversity is fundamental to addressing some of the world's greatest challenges: tackling climate change, achieving sustainable energy, improving human well-being and building a green economy.

To deliver conservation and sustainability at both the global and local level, IUCN builds on its strengths in the following areas:

- Science – 11,000 experts setting global standards in their fields, for example, the definitive international standard for species extinction risk – the IUCN Red List of Threatened Species™.
- Action – Hundreds of conservation projects all over the world from the local level to those involving several countries, all aimed at the sustainable management of biodiversity and natural resources.
- Influence – Through the collective strength of more than 1,200 government and non-governmental Member organizations, IUCN influences international environmental conventions, policies and laws.

Knowledge Café

The Knowledge Café sessions have the great advantage to involve small groups of participants. With a maximum of 12 people, a high level of participation is possible, allowing an in-depth examination of particular subjects. Here you will be able to test your ideas with individuals who share common interests and raise your awareness of different viewpoints. This open debate format ensures each can learn from one another in an informal, conversational set-up which will be sure to challenge your intellect.

Posters

A picture is worth a thousand words... Concise and to the point, posters provide a simple, clear way to present achievements and innovations in the field of conservation. On display during the entire roll-out of the Forum, posters offer a respite from the hustle and bustle of conferencing and a place to get informed at one's own pace. Stroll around the poster displays on the 1st and 3rd floor ICC Jeju in between sessions and see how people manage to convey their ideas on 2D.

Social Events

Networking and social interaction hold an essential role at the IUCN Congress. Not only do the conferencing sessions allow for new relationships to form; social events also liven up the Congress and provide participants with a welcoming place to wind down at the end of the day or during lunchtime. What is your idea for a fun time? Strolling along an art exhibition, checking out traditional dancing, tapping to a music performance, making new friends at a reception? These will all be part of the Jeju experience.

IUCN World Conservation Congress Jeju 2012

K-POP Nature⁺ Concert

The concert will take place to celebrate the opening of the 2012 IUCN World Conservation Congress and share the meaning of congress slogan Nature⁺ by linking the global environmental issues and Korean pops.

This concert organized by KBS, a South Korean radio and television network, is to be held in the special outdoor stage at ICC Jeju on 8 September 2012 at 19:00 - 21:30. It consists of 2 parts: Part 1 (performances by goodwill ambassadors of IUCN and the 2012 IUCN Congress) and Part 2 (performances of top Korean pop stars, including BoA and 2AM, and eco-friendly fashion show by the famous Korean fashion designer Lie Sang Bong). And it will be broadcasted through KBS World to 72 countries to maximize the significance of hosting the concert.

Pavilions

People are the driving force for a future with nature and through collective efforts we can bring about the changes needed to protect the environment our lives so depend on. The pavilions at the World Conservation Congress offer a window into the vast range of work that happens at IUCN. Implementing field projects and gathering data on the ground, the vast network of scientists and experts contributing to the IUCN cause constitutes an invaluable source of information that helps shape conservation work internationally and locally.

Visit the pavilions during your stay at the Congress and find out about some of the most compelling stories on conservation work today. You will be able to learn about the most innovative partnerships that will drive conservation globally in the coming few years, talk to the right people and see how you too can get inspired to help nature.

Conveniently located on both the main lobby and fifth floor of the International Convention Centre (ICC), the pavilions also provide an ideal venue to close a negotiation started at an event or simply mingle with other peers. Moreover, they will be the backdrop to regional side events, so keep an eye out for what's happening there!

● Species Pavilion

We all too often forget man is just another species of mammals. One of the most compelling arguments by nature is the variety of animals large and small that it homes. How sad the world would be if we couldn't be moved by their distinctiveness and beauty! Better knowledge about species, the threats they face and the conservation measures that can be taken helps drive action. This pavilion will showcase how, by combining world-class knowledge, standards and tools with a mobilized network of IUCN Members and partners, we can foster real change in policies and action on the ground to conserve species.

● Business & Economy Pavilion

No matter how hard we try to minimize our footprint on nature, we are all consumers and inevitably participate in the world's pollution. Nature conservation needs to engage all actors of society for it to be truly effective. Arguably, none has more impact on the environment than the business community, as it affects everything from production standards to consumption patterns. This pavilion showcases how business practices, market trends, consumer preferences and policy frameworks can be transformed to generate benefits for biodiversity and livelihoods depending on natural resources.

● Blue Planet Pavilion

There's a whole world going on beneath the surface of the ocean. It is so different from ours, so vast and mesmerizing, it never fails to fascinate whoever ventures into its depths. Oceans and seas cover 70% of the planet and host huge and unknown biodiversity. This pavilion will demonstrate how, by sharing knowledge, exchanging information and views and launching and promoting marine conservation and sustainable development activities, we can ensure and foster the conservation of marine biodiversity, as well as the equitable and sustainable use of our oceans.

Programme

● Protected Planet Pavilion

Man's step on the environment can be overwhelming if unchecked, too often leading to irreversible losses in nature's wildlife. The conservation of biodiversity increasingly relies on the foundation of protected areas. Such defined territories, including World Heritage Sites, make a significant contribution to addressing some of the world's greatest challenges, while also promoting thriving communities and enhancing the resilience of the planet. This pavilion will describe how effective management and governance of protected areas are vital to a just and equitably shared planet for the benefit of all.

● A Just World Pavilion

People depend on the resources produced by nature. Yet nature's products are subject to social, geographic, economic and political considerations. The quality of decision-making processes around natural resources management affects the success of biodiversity conservation and the extent to which ecosystems can maintain and enhance their capacity to contribute to human well-being. This pavilion is about sharing power, responsibility and benefits in natural resource management, as well as strengthening governance arrangements, including legal entitlements, to make decisions more transparent, inclusive and equitable, may enhance opportunities for resilient communities and ecosystems.

● Korea Pavilion

The Korea pavilion(Greening Korea) displays the successful practices for green growth in Korea and exhibits various activities to conserve ecosystems including the DMZ under the theme of "Green Growth and the DMZ in Korea". This pavilion will offer opportunities to share the best practices in environmental conservation and major outcomes and to encourage free discussions by conducting diverse event programs during the Forum on the fifth floor of the Congress venue.

● Jeju Pavilion

Jeju was formed from the volcanic activities, and it is a hub for ecosystems which is known for its various and unique volcanic formations. Jeju was designated as a Biosphere Reserve in 2002, a World Natural Heritage in 2007 and a Global Geoparks Network in 2010, receiving all the three UNESCO designations in natural sciences. Also it was designated as one of New Seven Wonders of Nature in 2011. Jeju, the island of life for 7 billion global citizens has its own birth myth, history, and the unique characteristics of local culture. The island is now building its image as a sustainable eco-city, eco-tourism, and a world environmental hub. This pavilion can be found on the fifth floor of the ICC Jeju.

Conservation Campus

Knowledge is a key component of the IUCN Congress and the Conservation Campus gives you the chance to take advantage of cutting-edge expertise. The commitment and scope of specialists providing trainings there form a skills pool of such breadth and diversity that it promises to create one of the richest learning experiences.

Positions are limited to 50 participants maximum per session. Preregistration is therefore required and can be done through your online registration account. There may be some places available for on-site registration. Additional information will be available at the Registration centre or the information desks.

The Conservation Campus is taking place at the Lotte Hotel in Jungmoon Resort, five minutes' drive or 30 minutes' walk from the Congress venue (ICC Jeju). Shuttle buses are organised each morning, lunchtime and evening between ICC Jeju and the Lotte Hotel. Ask at the Congress information desk for more information.

World Leaders Dialogues

The World Leaders Dialogues are “prime time” high-level sessions during the IUCN World Conservation Congress. They feature internationally recognized experts, politicians and CEOs in a series of five moderated public debates that tackle the most strategic issues related to conservation and sustainable development.

The Dialogues are organized under the auspices of the Korean Government and the President of IUCN. With high media exposure, and innovative techniques, these 90-minute sessions will offer strategic thinking to guide the implementation of practical solutions for a sustainable future.

Media headlines are filled with stories of individuals achieving significant change, be they politicians, CEOs, NGO activists or religious leaders. Whatever their walk of life, these are people who, through their personal achievements, their day-to-day work or their charisma, can influence others and translate words into actions.

Topics of the dialogues

7 September

Nature+ climate: Can Nature save us?

8 September

Nature+ food: Can we feed the world sustainably?

9 September

Nature+ development: Green growth: myth or reality?

10 September

Nature+ people & governance: Can conservation tackle poverty?

11 September

Nature+: Saving nature, why bother?'

When, Where and How?

The five World Leaders Dialogues will be held from 7 to 11 September, every day from 17:00 to 18:30 in the Tamna Hall. The format will be a discussion between five to six internationally-recognized experts, moderated by a leading environmental journalist.

Participants are encouraged to interact with the panellists and moderator by posting their comments and questions online. Video relays of the sessions will be broadcast throughout the Congress venue and relevant Internet channels.

During the congress, you can visit www.iucn.org/wld to enter your name and your question (maximum 140 characters). During the events themselves, you can also visit www.iucn.org/wld/question with your mobile device. Selected questions will appear on the screen behind the panelists.

• Nature-based solutions to climate change

Nature+ climate: Can Nature save us?

Human-induced climate change continues unabated, and some of its impacts are irreversible. Reducing greenhouse gas emissions is the only long-term answer to stabilising the global climate. But as a new wide-ranging global climate deal remains elusive, many are turning to nature-based solutions, like REDD+ (reducing emissions from deforestation and ecosystem degradation), to help stave off the worst effects of climate change. Nature has often been portrayed as the victim of climate change but healthy natural ecosystems such as forests, peatlands and wetlands are critical for absorbing and storing carbon and helping us adapt.

- But are these measures enough?
- Can ecosystems really make a difference before it is too late?
- What have we learnt already about nature-based solutions to climate change and what are the challenges for the future?

8 SEPTEMBER

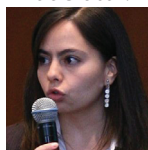

• nature+food
• Nature-based solutions to food security

Nature+ food: Can we feed the world sustainably?

Food production systems rely on the richness and diversity of natural ecosystems. One billion people worldwide rely on fish as their primary protein source, while bush meat provides 80% of the protein and fat intake for rural communities in Central Africa. Pollination services are worth an estimated USD 153 billion annually. Agriculture everywhere relies on adequate and well-managed water resources. Fisheries production also relies on healthy marine and freshwater ecosystems – and at the moment is far from sustainable. To secure food supplies, equitable and sustainable use of natural resources is required. Food security is also linked to human security on a broader level.

- Are we serious about redirecting 'perverse' subsidies that currently wipe out biodiversity on land and in the sea?
- What impacts are biofuels likely to have on food production and food security?
- What is the role of technology in feeding the world?
- Can sound environmental management help prevent or reduce conflicts and improve human security?

• Nature-based solutions to social and economic development

Nature+ development: Green growth: myth or reality?

Although awareness of the economic significance of nature is increasing, it has yet to trigger the kind of change needed to make our economies and lifestyles truly sustainable. Several countries have started a process of restructuring their national economies towards “green growth”.

- What does “green growth” mean in practice?
- How “green” is “green growth” and, is it possible to reconcile economic with environmental goals?
- How can we resolve the inevitable “green dilemmas”, for example, in the energy sector?
- What does “green growth” means in terms of jobs?
- Are there alternatives to our current economic model?

10 SEPTEMBER • nature+people & governance
Effective and equitable governance of nature's use

Nature+ people & governance: Can conservation tackle poverty?

People everywhere depend directly or indirectly on nature for their wellbeing. From food, fuel and freshwater, to crop pollination, flood protection and climate regulation, nature provides the fundamental infrastructure needed for our societies to survive and prosper. Nature's benefits, however, are not equally shared. Richer countries are better placed to reap benefits from nature, while poorer nations bear the cost of biodiversity loss and see little benefit. All too often, nature is absent from development aid.

- Can we strike a better balance?
- Can we achieve conservation without sacrificing social justice?
- What can we change in our current model for nature's benefits to be properly reflected in national economies and individual incomes?
- How can we ensure that the rights of indigenous and other vulnerable communities are truly taken into account?

11 SEPTEMBER • nature+life Valuing and conserving nature

Nature+ life : Saving nature, why bother?

The four World Leaders Dialogues will culminate in the final dialogue of the Forum by seeking to answer the central question: "Saving nature, why bother?" This session, while closing the Forum, will also serve to directly link the World Leaders Dialogues to the overall message of the Forum and to lead into the next segment of the Congress: the IUCN Members' Assembly.

- Are we overestimating the importance of conserving biological diversity?
- What does biodiversity mean for development?
- Who is responsible for conserving nature?
- Can development happen without nature?
- Can we live without nature?

Members' Assembly

The Members' Assembly, the main governing body of IUCN, brings together IUCN's Member organizations and institutions to debate and establishes environmental policy. More than 100 resolutions and recommendations are expected to be adopted by this unique global environmental parliament of governments and NGOs. Members also vote on IUCN's Programme of work and Financial Plan for the following four years, elect the IUCN President and Council, and manage the business affairs of the Union.

Agenda

Responding to one of the key outcomes of the external evaluation of the 2008 World Conservation Congress, the infused structure of the Forum and Members' Assembly agendas represents a major innovation of the 2012 World Conservation Congress, forging a stronger connection between the two main elements of the Congress. Whereas previous Congresses saw the Members' Assembly begin once the Forum had ended, this time the Assembly will begin earlier through the running of five daily two-hour sessions in the mornings before the Forum opens. By aligning the agendas of these morning sessions with the Forum theme on the basis of the Draft IUCN Programme 2013-2016, the Members' Assembly will ensure in-depth discussion of the Programme, while links between discussions held in Forum events and those related to proposed motions in the Members' Assembly will be strengthened.

Indicative Agenda for Morning Assembly Sitzings: 8-12 September

- 08:45 – 09:00 Highlights from the Previous Day of Congress Forum
- 09:00 – 09:15 Presentation of 2013-2016 Programme
- 09:15 – 10:10 Discussion on Programme and Tabling/Voting of Motions
- 10:10 – 10:30 Elections

Programme

In addition to providing inputs from the Forum into the Members' Assembly, these morning sittings will also reflect on progress made in the implementation of the 2009-2012 IUCN Programme, present the proposed Programme for 2013-2016, and discuss and vote on motions related to the daily theme.

The morning Assembly sittings will end with the presentation and election of Regional Councillor candidates. These elections will be grouped by region and staged during 6 different Assembly sittings between 9 and 12 September.

 The first sitting of the Assembly, on Friday 8 September, will begin at 8 am – 30 minutes earlier than the four subsequent morning sittings – in order to allow sufficient time to cover the necessary initial procedural matters (adoption of agenda; appointment of Congress Committees; and adoption of amendments to Rules of Procedure of the World Conservation Congress).

After the closing of the Forum on the evening of Tuesday September 11th, the rest of the Congress will be dedicated exclusively to the Members' Assembly. The main topics to be covered during the final eight Assembly sittings are listed in the table, below.

Congress Documents

Documents are available for nearly all items on the agenda of the Members' Assembly. A first batch of documents mainly covering the agenda items for which Congress decisions are required has been posted on the Congress website in all three official IUCN languages on 5 April 2012. A second batch with the remaining documents has been posted there on 8 July 2012. Updated versions or new documents may be posted there as they become available.

For the first time, Congress documents have only been made available via electronic means in order to help reduce the footprint of the 2012 Congress.

During Congress, new documents or revised versions of motions and other documents will continue to be made available primarily via the Congress website. A limited amount of copies will be printed only for delegations which request to receive hard copies.

The Congress Committees

- Steering Committee: This Committee, required by the IUCN Statutes, oversees the overall organization of the Congress and is comprised of the Council appointed Congress Preparatory Committee, as well as the President, Vice-Presidents and Director General.
- Credentials Committee: This Committee examines and supervises the accreditation process of Member delegations and certifies to the Congress the delegates in good standing (dues paid up to and including 2011) who are able to exercise their voting rights. The committee is composed of members nominated by the President and approved by Congress.
- Resolutions Committee: The Resolutions Committee aims to ensure the fair consideration of motions to be adopted as Resolutions and Recommendations. The committee is elected by Congress and includes members of the Resolutions Working Group established by Council to prepare motions for consideration by Congress.
- Programme Committee: This Committee supports the process for approving the 2013-2016 Programme and specifically the impact of motions that affect the Programme or a Commission mandate.
- Finance and Audit Committee: The Finance and Audit Committee will be elected at the opening of the Congress to review the finances of the Union in the period 2008-12, the proposed intersessional financial plan 2013-16, and to advise on any financial matter referred to it by the plenary sessions including to comment on the financial implications of actions called for in motions.
- Governance Committee: The Governance Committee will be elected at the opening of the Congress. It will make recommendations related to proposals by Council to amend the IUCN Statutes or any other governance related issues and motions.

Regional Members' Meetings

All regions will have Members' meetings during the first two days of Congress. The regional meetings will be followed by an informal gathering for Members and candidates in the Members Lounge in order to allow interactions with the candidates before voting begins.

The schedule and room allocations for these Regional Members' Meetings are provided in the table below:

	Fri 7 th		Sat 8 th
	Meso and South America	Tamna Hall	North America and the Caribbean	103 (Press Conference Room)
19:00	South and East Asia	102 (Yeongju B)	Oceania	401

			West Asia	203

Programme

Elections

Another new feature of the 2012 Members' Assembly is the scheduling of elections for the IUCN Council over several days. In order to avoid having a single – very long – sitting dedicated entirely to the renewal of IUCN's governing body, the candidate presentations and elections will be held during 6 different Assembly sittings, starting on 9 September. The details of the elections schedule are provided in the table, below.

For the first time, elections will be held through an electronic voting system. Instead of distributing, collecting, and counting paper ballots, delegates to the Jeju Congress will use their microphone units and voting cards to elect their preferred candidates.

Programme

- Although the voting will take place over several days, the results will be communicated jointly on the Congress website after all the election rounds have been completed at the end of the day of 12 September.
- A comprehensive guide on the electronic elections system is available on the Congress website.
- Also, an introductory presentation on the electronic elections system will be given during the first Members' Assembly sitting on 8 September.
- Further, information on the candidates will be made available in the three official IUCN languages on posters displayed in the Congress venue and on the Election Candidates section of the Congress website. The election candidate pages on the website enable online interaction between candidates and IUCN Members.

• Nature-based solutions to climate change

IUCN puts nature at the centre of climate change solutions. Healthy forests, wetlands and coastal areas can store substantial amounts of carbon and help people adapt to the impacts of climate change that are being felt across the world. When developed in an equitable and sustainable manner, mechanisms such as Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation (REDD) can reduce emissions, conserve biodiversity and enhance human well-being.

- nature+food
- Nature-based solutions to food security

The linkage between biodiversity, water and food security is important to recognize, as humans consume more than 7,000 different species of plants and animals. In the drive to address food security, there is a lack of understanding among policy makers that for many people, especially the more than 70% in less developed rural areas, wild sources of food form an integral part of people's diets. Loss of biodiversity and degradation of ecosystems undermines health, livelihoods, food production, and the availability of clean water—what grows in the wild is just as important as what grows on farms.

The Business and Ecosystems Think Tank (Workshops 337 & 338)

on 8 September from 11.00 am to 1.00 pm and 2.00 pm to 4.30 pm, Yeongju Hall A

Co-convened by IUCN and the World Business Council for Sustainable Development (WBCSD), the Think Tank will challenge business and conservation communities to discuss and debate real solutions for changing pace on biodiversity and ecosystem services. Julia Marton-Lefevre, IUCN Director General, and Peter Bakker, WBCSD President will open the debate at 11.00 am, and will be followed by business leaders, who will illustrate effective business action on biodiversity and ecosystems (morning session) and government and financial institution representatives who will elaborate on what are effective policies (afternoon session). The Think Tank will close at 4.30 pm with reflections from leading CEOs, NGOs and Indigenous People representatives.

Nature-based solutions to social and economic development

If many measures of development such as income and life expectancy have improved in recent decades, the benefits of global economic growth have been uneven. Social inequality and environmental degradation have arisen as a direct result of the pursuit of unsustainable management of the Earth's natural wealth.

IUCN wants to see a rapid transition to a green economy, one that recognizes the fundamental dependence of human well-being on nature and the critical benefits and services it provides. It is time for countries to act collectively to reform the economy so that it supports efforts to eliminate poverty, protect biodiversity and ecosystem services, and promotes sustainable development.

- nature+people & governance
- 10 SEPTEMBER • Effective and equitable governance of nature's use

People everywhere depend on nature for their well-being. From food, fuel and freshwater, to crop pollination, flood protection and climate regulation, nature provides the fundamental infrastructure needed for societies to survive and prosper.

But decisions on nature management and use are not always fair and appropriate, and nature's benefits are not equitably shared. Richer countries and social elites are better placed to reap the benefits while poorer nations and communities bear the cost of biodiversity loss and get little or no benefit. How to strike a better balance?

The 2012 IUCN Congress will showcase ways to share power, responsibility and benefits with respect to natural resources, as well as to make laws and regulations more transparent and inclusive.

Valuing and conserving nature

Biological diversity is essential for human well-being: it provides food security, human health, clean air and water.

Biodiversity contributes directly to local livelihoods and economic development. We need to do better at proving that conserving biodiversity is not a sacrifice, but an opportunity that brings many benefits. The value of nature is irreplaceable and essential to human well-being. The 2012 World Conservation Congress will help show the world that conservation action works. Whether it's through enacting laws and policies, implementing species recovery programmes, establishing protected areas or restoring ecosystems, it will showcase examples and provide momentum for further action.
